"WHAT EVEN IS A BUTTONWOOD?"

Our thoughtfully crafted menu pays homage to the document that birthed the New York Stock Exchange. This iconic Wall Street institution was born on May 17, 1792, when 24 brokers and traders signed a document known as the Buttonwood Agreement.

Before the Agreement was signed, there were no rules governing the stock market. Trades took place all over the city in auction houses, offices, and random coffeehouses. Deals often fell through and it was impossible to know if the person taking your money was a real broker or a con man.

In the aftermath of the Financial Panic of 1792, trust in the marketplace was low and people were hesitant to invest. The Buttonwood Agreement was an attempt to regulate the trading environment and convince people it was safe to invest again.
